Declaring that "self-defense and preparation for it is as necessary now as the administration's preparedness program as a proof that the party beought not to be necessary, and that to lieved in "preparedness without mili-

"In 1906," he continued, "I attended the great peace conference held in London. I thought that the millennium of peace had come and such a thing as the world's war was impossible. But that day when the Christian heart shall rule the world is not in sight. We must not mistake dishonor for peace, as we cannot mistake oppression for peace. Woodrow Wilson and the democratic party advocate an army big enough to make aggressors think the second time before they strike a blow. Democracy wants an army and a navy in keeping with the dignity, preservation and worth of this great republic. We do not want a foot of anybody else's soil, and, by the eternal God, they shall not take a foot of ours.

The senator also replied to republican criticism of the administration's shipping bill, which he declared would have given the United States an adequate merchant marine by now had it not been killed at the last session of Congress by a republican filibuster.

"For the first time in the history of our country," said Senator James, after reviewing briefly democratic legislation which he declared had made prosperity possible, "the United States leads the world in exports. We are more prosperous than ever, and mills which have not turned a spindle for years are now busy. All the laborers of the United States are employed as never before. With the world-war raging, our country is the only neutral one that is not in distress, and the only one that has not declared a moratorium. Every demand of the stress of war, the democratic party has, met quickly. We have freed business from the blackmail of the politician as we have emancipated it from the clutch of monopoly."

senator said, when there was an in-vasion of American territory, and the punitive expedition now was doing all that this country could do with honor that this country could do with honor in Mexico.

"No President during the life of this republic," said the senator, "has ever had to deal with so many delicate and dangerous problems as those which have, confronted President Wilson. With more than half of the world in arms in Europe, with Mexico in revolution at our border, these difficult and complicating problems have confronted him almost daily, and he has handled them as becomes a patriot and a statesman.

"When the Tausitania was sunk the militant voice of Theodore Roosevel cried out for war, and if he had been President of the United States at that time, today 500,000 brave American sons would be contending around the forts of Verdun in this mighty maelstrom of blood-thousands would have been buried in ditches. Our President, strom of blood—thousands would have been buried in ditches. Our President, patient, patient, patrient, patrient, patrient, patrient, patrient, patrient with the greatest ability and won for America its greatest diplomatic victory.

"There are happily two kinds of courage, the courage of the man who is willing to undertake the dangers himself and the courage of the man that sends others to the conflict. Woodrow Wilson has both kinds of courage—the courage of conflict and the courage to act coolly and sensibly when he is dealing with the lives of others—the fate of a nation.

"Four years ago they sneeringly called Woodrow Wilson the school teacher. Today he is the world teacher. His subject is the protection of American life and American rights under international law. And without orphaning a single American nother, without firing a single gun, he wrung from the most militant spirit that ever brooded above a battlefield, an acknowledgement of American rights and an agreement to American demands. He has elevated himself to that lofty but lowly eminence, occupied by George Washington, Abraham Lincoln and Woodrow Wilson, the three worst abused and best loved Americans the republic ever grew."

"During this administration we have done more to build up an army and navy in three years than the republican party did in forty years of its existence. More has been done to give the American people a navy and army in three months than Col. Roosevelt and Mr. Taft did in eleven years."

Senator James spoke of the republican platform declaration for "a continuous policy of national defense," declaring that only two propositions for a continuous policy ever had been made in American history—one by the general board of the navy in 1903, which was pigeonholed by a republican Secretary of the Navy, and the other by President Wilson in his address to Congress last December.

"But what happened when this matter was under consideration in the naval affairs committee of the House?" continued the senator. "Every republican member on the committee decided to oppose the President's 'continuous program,' and would yote, for no program, and would yote, for no program, longer than one year, After six-
